

WELCOME

Welcome to the May/June I2S News, where we highlight new additions to the resources on the I2S website (<http://i2s.anu.edu.au>), as well as the latest blog posts published on the Integration and Implementation Insights blog (<http://I2Insights.org>). As always, we welcome contributions and feedback.

FEATURED TOOLS

Stakeholder analysis: the alignment, interest and influence matrix

This tool aims to identify the primary stakeholders, as well as suggesting how best to interact with them. It was developed to influence policy in development settings and is usually conducted as a group process with diverse participants, who have insights into different aspects of the policy and the relevant key players. It involves a five-step process.

Step 1. Identify the main stakeholders.

Step 2. Map the stakeholders onto a matrix according to their level of alignment and interest (each rated high or low). Think about the relative positioning of stakeholders in the same quadrant and record the reasons for the position allocated.

To determine alignment ask the following questions: "Do they agree with our approach? Do they agree with our assumptions? Do they want to do the same things that we think need to be done? Are they thinking what we are thinking?"

To determine interest ask the following questions: "Are they committing time and money to this issue? Do they want something to happen (whether it is for or against what we propose)? Are they going to events on the subject? Are they publicly speaking about this?"

Step 3. Consider what to do, for example:

High alignment and high interest – develop an alliance or community of practice

High alignment and low interest – raise awareness of the issue and its importance

Low alignment and high interest – try to change their minds or neutralise their influence.

Step 4. Prioritise by identifying those who are most influential and accessible.

Step 5. Develop a "pathway of change" for target stakeholders, describing specific changes in behaviour that you would like to achieve.

- Video: A video of a workshop demonstrating the use of this tool is provided at: <http://i2s.anu.edu.au/resources/policy-entrepreneur-tools-rapid-alignment-interest-and-influence-matrix>.
  - In this video, the following general principles are provided for Step 3:
    - High alignment and high interest – learn in partnership
    - High alignment and low interest – develop enthusiasm to address topic
    - Low alignment and high interest – challenge existing beliefs
    - Low alignment and low interest – develop awareness and enthusiasm.

Stakeholder analysis: power, legitimacy and urgency

The aim of this analysis is to determine "who or what really counts". Although developed in a business context, the analysis has broader relevance.

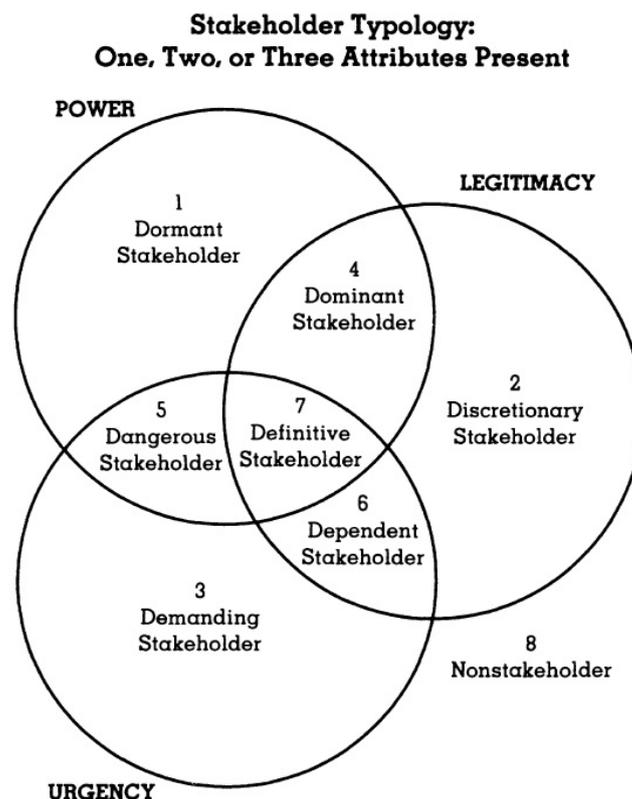

Power, legitimacy and urgency are defined as follows:

- Power: "A relationship among social actors in which one social actor, A, can get another social actor, B, to do something that B would not have otherwise done." The bases for power can be "Coercive-force/threat", "Utilitarian-material/incentives" and/or "Normative-symbolic influences".
- Legitimacy: "A generalized perception or assumption that the actions of an entity are desirable, proper, or appropriate within some socially constructed system of norms, values, beliefs, definitions.” The bases for legitimacy can be individual, organizational, and/or societal.

- Urgency: “The degree to which stakeholder claims call for immediate attention.”

Stakeholders are then mapped according to how they rate on each attribute. The diagram below describes the names given to each kind of stakeholder. The combination of attributes can be used to determine how to interact with any stakeholder. It is worth noting that these attributes can vary over time, so that the appropriate interactions can also change over time.

FEATURED VIDEO

Unknowns in Inter- and Trans-disciplinary Settings

The problem of dealing with unknowns does not reside in any one discipline. Instead, it inhabits many disciplines. Nearly all disciplines and practice domains have perspectives on the unknown, and their perspectives employ methods ranging from mathematics to discourse analysis. These perspectives are, however, fragmented and specific to their discipline’s linguistic-conceptual frameworks. Thus, researchers and scholars have difficulty communicating across disciplines about the unknown. Even explicitly defined or technical concepts such as 'probability' or 'risk' may have distinct meanings in different disciplines. Likewise, a layperson's construal of unknowns necessarily is culturally and historically specific, so that a culturally heterogeneous population of stakeholders may embody a heterogeneous set of perspectives on unknowns.

Cross-disciplinary undertakings require approaches to dealing with unknowns and also with the multiplicity of views about them. This video surveys the problems raised thereby, and methods for addressing those problems. The chief problems include:

1. Assessing epistemological trade-offs
2. Developing a common terminology and set of concepts
3. Overcoming "blind spots" about unknowns
4. Establishing methodological pluralism
5. Developing inclusive but productive discourses.

This video "Dealing with unknowns in inter- and trans-disciplinary settings" presented by Michael Smithson was a plenary talk at the First Global Conference on Research Integration and Implementation held in Canberra, Australia, online and at co-conferences in Germany, the Netherlands and Uruguay, 8-11 September, 2013. ## FEATURED JOURNALS

Educational Action Research

Educational Action Research is concerned with exploring the dialogue between research and practice in educational settings". It "publishes accounts of a range of action research and related studies, in education and across the professions, with the aim of making their outcomes widely available and exemplifying the variety of possible styles of reporting. It aims to establish and maintain a review of the literature of action research. It also provides a forum for dialogue on the methodological and epistemological issues, enabling different approaches to be subjected to critical reflection and analysis".

It is the journal of the Collaborative Action Research Network (CARN).

- Website: http://www.tandfonline.com/action/journalInformation?show=aimsScope&journalCode=rea\_c20#.V06CA\_mGNhG

Palgrave Communications

Palgrave Communications is an open access online-only journal which focuses on the humanities, the social sciences and business. It fosters "interaction, creativity and reflection within and between the rich disciplines the journal encompasses". These disciplines include: anthropology; business; economics; cultural studies; geography; international studies; history; information systems; law; languages; operational research; philosophy; religion; sociology; and science studies. Of particular interest to I2S is operational research and a thematic collection on interdisciplinarity.

The thematic collection on interdisciplinarity is "dedicated to the concept of interdisciplinarity within and between disciplines in the humanities, social sciences and business studies". Articles in the collection "explore evolving definitions of the term 'interdisciplinary', as well as different perspectives on the need and drive for interdisciplinary research, and provide case studies of effective collaborative research in practice". The thematic collection on interdisciplinarity can be found at: <http://www.palgrave-journals.com/palcomms/article-collections/interdisciplinarity>.

FEATURED ASSOCIATIONS

Association Française de Science des Systèmes (AFSCET) (French Association for Systems and Cybernetic Studies)

The Association Française de Science des Systèmes (AFSCET) focuses on supporting a transdisciplinary approach using systems thinking and cybernetics to the complex problems of today.

The Association organizes seminars and workshops devoted to deepening systemic theories and practices. A number of working groups are active, including the AFSCET Café; Modeling of Complex Systems; System Dynamics; and, Control Equipment and Systems Interaction with Risks. AFSCET hosts an online review called Res-Systemica and publishes a variety of materials in support of its goals.

It was founded in 1999.

- Website (in French only): <http://afscet.asso.fr/>

Society for Implementation Research Collaboration (SIRC)

The Society for Implementation Research Collaboration (SIRC) is "dedicated to facilitating communication and collaboration between implementation research teams, researchers, and community providers. SIRC aims to bring together researchers and stakeholders committed to the rigorous evaluation of implementation" of Evidence Based Psychosocial Interventions (EBPI).

SIRC runs a biannual conference dedicated to facilitating communication and collaboration between implementation research teams, researchers, and community providers alongside supporting a community interested in advancing the field of implementation research (known as the Network of Expertise).

It was founded in around 2010.

FEATURED CONFERENCE

60th Annual Meeting of the International Society for the Systems Sciences (ISSS) and 1st Policy Congress – An East-West Systems Dialogue

The annual meeting of the ISSS - an East-West Systems Dialogue – combines two conferences on different continents - in India, the co-conference focuses on Leadership for Sustainability of Socio-Ecological Systems; whilst in the USA the co-conference focuses on Realizing Sustainable Futures in Socio-Ecological Systems. They are both connected in seeking participation from "environmental, ecological, economic, ethical, policy, and other social and natural system academicians and practitioners, from around the world... in discussing how to realize whole socio-ecological systems and to expand our choices for the future by advancing systems thinking."

In the USA co-conference and dialogue, the central questions are focused on system sustainability and how to achieve it. Central concerns include: "What does it mean for a system to be whole and sustainable? What does it require of us today to achieve it?" In this there is a need for "improved knowledge, practices, competencies and models to comprehend system sustainability and to guide critical development needs, through research, education, institutional cooperation, new management and leadership approaches, entrepreneurial opportunities, and professional involvement."

In the India co-conference and dialogue the central questions are focused on contemplating the natural ecosystems that support our life on Earth and how “companies, business sectors, research organizations, municipal administrations and national agencies” are exploring sustainable systems through approaches and policies around habitat reengineering for sustainable livelihoods. The title of the conference, Leadership for Sustainable Socio-ecological Systems, promotes young minds to ponder over the engineering systems and Green technologies needed to support our living conditions.

The conference will be held in two locations across similar dates:

- University of Vignan, Vadlamudi, India, on 23-25 July 2016
- University of Colorado, Boulder, United States of America, on 24-30 July 2016
- For further details, please see:

ABOUT I2S NEWS

The aim of this newsletter is to provide regular (bi-monthly) updates about new resources added to the Integration and Implementation Sciences website (<http://i2s.anu.edu.au/resources>). These resources are useful for researchers interested in Integration and Implementation Sciences (I2S), which underpins the investigation and tackling of complex real world problems, by:

- Synthesizing knowledge from different disciplines and stakeholders,
- Understanding and managing diverse unknowns, and
- Providing integrated research support for policy and practice change.

In general, each issue features tools (concepts and methods), case studies and/or approaches relevant to I2S - either a useful compilation or one or more examples of note. We also provide information about journals, professional associations & networks, professional development courses and conferences where researchers can learn from others, report their findings and interact with like-minded peers. The newsletter also reports on discussions in the LinkedIn group "Global Network for Research Integration and Implementation": <http://www.linkedin.com/groups/Global-Network-Research-Integration-Implementation-4888295> and new entries on the Integration and Implementation Insights blog: <http://I2Insights.org>.
